ANGARA: RP'S LARGEST OIL SPILL

Massive oil spill threatens white Boracay beaches

PRIMITIVE WAY of cleaning up heavy crude oil is expected to last for three months manually done by 250 workers. So far, 17,800 sacks of contaminated materials have been collected. Naposcor cites lack of equipment and personnel for the delay.

By Philip C. Tabares

A MASSIVE OIL SPILL CAUSED by a National Power Corp. barge last December is threatening the world-famous Boracay island resort, senators said yesterday.

Senators Edgardo Angara and Abraham Defensor Santiago called on Naposcor to speed up its cleanup of the oil spill, noting that it had been more than a month since the barge had spilled from a Naposcor power barge on Dec. 26.

Angara said the spill occurred only 10 km from Boracay.

"It was said that there is a possibility that it might have long-term adverse consequences on Boracay waters," Santiago said.

"Naposcor should speed up the cleanup of the oil spill and compensate those who were affected," SANTIAGO said.

SCANDAL IN PARADISE: The talk of Boracay island is what is considered the country's largest oil spill ever. A Naposcor barge spilled reportedly 195,000 liters of bunker fuel last Dec. 26. It all the shores of Semirara, only 10 km from the white beaches of Boracay.

AFP grills 5 Faeldon supporters

THE MILITARY'S INTERNAL SPY unit has mounted a crackdown against suspected supporters of Marine Capt. Antonio Faeldon, springing soldiers involved in the failed July 27, 2005, Oplan Enduring Liberty.

The Armed Forces of the Philippines Counter Intelligence Group (AFPCIG) is investigating the soldiers suspected of having helped the "Mangrove" leader in a military campaign in a show of defiance during the 44 days he was on the loose.

Faeldon escaped last December after a hearing of the court-martial case at a Manila city court. He was recovered last Friday by soldiers with Faeldon was Capt. Candidato Rivero, who was the spokesman of the ousted over-captain.

SC nullifies Meralco's 13.27¢/kWh hike in '04

By Armand N. Novum

THE SUPREME COURT YESTERDAY declared null and void the 13.27-cent-per-kilowatt-hour increase in generation charge that the Energy Regulatory Commission (ERC) granted Manila Electric Co. in 2004 because the company did not provide evidence about the rate increase.

The high court also ordered that the ERC decision approving the increase in Meralco's rate from P3.1858 per kWh to P3.3223 per kWh be "immediately" set aside. The hearing took place with grave abuse of discretion.

The decision was silent on whether Meralco customers would get a refund.

The ruling, penned by Associate Justice Romeo Caguioa, was approved unanimously by all 14 justices, with Associate Justice Sotelo Tingo filing a separate concurring opinion on the case.

The tribunal ruled against the ERC and Meralco for their failure to publish Meralco's application for a rate increase in newspapers of general circulation.

"The lack of publication of Meralco's intended application for the increase of its generation charge is... fatal. By this reasoning, the consumers were deprived of the right to file their comments thereon," the high court said.

The Supreme Court said the process required "that the consumers be notified of any application, and be apprised of its contents, that would result in compounding their economic burden."

Fertilizer fund scam detailed in Senate

By TJ Bernalde

A BROKER FOR A VIRTUALLY unknown medical supplier yesterday exposed an alleged conspiracy between Department of Agriculture officials and local politicians to skim off the DA fund for liquid fertilizer.

Testifying at the Senate inquiry into the P725-million fertilizer fund scam, Jose Barredo Jr. told his most with congressmen, governors and mayors in their homes to persuade them to avail their services of the DA fund by dropping an offer—a 30-percent commission.

The fertilizer fund was said to have been used to ensure the victory of President Macapagal-Arroyo in the May 2004 elections.

In a close, casual testimony, Barredo outlined how the money of the officials who allegedly took hefty commissions and even donated the amount they should receive.

He said that at times, he personally delivered to some of them the commissions and the liquid fertilizer, some of which was distributed and completed.

The officials mentioned by Barredo included Representative Mico Paez (Iloilo) and Senator

Riding on the popularity of such marketing, the Department of En-

Filipino seamen losing out to automation, competition

SHIPPING AUTOMATION ARMED SHIPS and competition from Asian neighbors are cutting into demand for the Filipino who make up 25 percent of the sailors in the global shipping industry, the International Labor Organization said yesterday.

The current shipbuilding boom has created strong demand for officers worldwide, the ILO said. But the most crucial automation trends with smaller crews has reduced the need for lower-skilled seafarers, known as ratings.

To make jobs become more specialized and autonomous, the required skills can be taught, the ILO said in a statement. The need for skilled deck officers and engineers continues to rise, while others' jobs come under the need for lower skilled ratings to shipping.

It describes reports by the Baltic and International Maritime Council of a steady, wide-spread decrease of 13,000 qualified officers and seamen of 135,000 ratings, the ILO said. Aside from declining overall demand, low-skilled Filipino sailors are facing competition from Asian neighbors like China, India, Myanmar and Vietnam, just as Filipinos reported on their European and American counterparts in the past, the ILO said.

The labor body said the benchmark monthly wage for Filipino ratings is $1,400, while sailors from other Asian countries are accepting jobs for as low as $900 to $1,100. Some ship-owners also are increasingly imposing age restrictions—maximums as low as 40 years, it said.

But the fast-paced shipping industry and labor movements are urging more ship-owners still prefer Filipino seamen because they speak English, are Western-trained and flexible and have working attitude.

The labor body said it is now calling on the Maritime Labor Convention to reflect the needs of a globalized shipping industry. If adopted, it will monitor and update more than 45 international labor standards. AP

Appeals court asked to clear backlog of cases

By Armand P. Novicio

THE NOW PRESIDING JUSTICE OF THE Court of Appeals, Roberto T. Reyes, has asked the CA justices to clear the backlog of cases in their courts, saying that no real justice is done until when cases are disposed.

Reyes said he wanted to make the CA "responsive and reasonable in its decisions and resolutions, and responsive and responsive to the challenges of judicial service."

"After 400 years, we will address expeditiously the matter of eliminating the backlog in cases," Reyes said in an interview.

He said the appellate court, which receives an average of 5,000 cases a year, would be giving priority to cases that are more than a year old from the date of submission.

As of Jan. 2, he said there were only 16 cases dating back to 1999 unresolved.

Reyes said he would have an order today that the 14 cases be decided in 60 days and at the end, within the next 30 months, from March to November.

"This is just to be decided all appealed cases from 2000 to 2004," he said.

Reyes himself has a "zero backlog" in his sala, Reyes said he would submit to work on some of the oldest cases.

The CA presiding justice said there were only a total of 13,000 pending cases before the appellate court, which was founded 70 years ago. He said the court has resolved 14,000 of the 13,000 cases since then but he said.

"So by December, we can easily dispatch the 13,000 pending cases this year so that the 13,000 to 12,000 cases that we will receive this year will all be current cases and new revenue making," he said.

The court considers as backlog cases those that have remained undecided for more than one year from the date of submission.

Reyes, who was appointed to the court, said CA justices have managed to reduce in an average of two years the time needed for cases to be resolved—a marked improvement from the 15 to 20 years that it used to take for CA appellate cases.

However, he foresees a drastic increase in the number of cases to be handled by the court now that the Supreme Court has thrown to the CA all appealed administrative cases filed before the Office of the Ombudsman.

"The Supreme Court declared that all these appeals or petitions for review from the (Ombudsman) should be brought to the CA first and from there to the high court," he said.

Bush 'State' speech greeted by doubts

WASHINGTON—President George W. Bush's new appeal for greater democracy in the Middle East and efforts to make dramatic cuts in oil imports from the region was greeted Wednesday with doubts and some opposition.

The president's call for a 75 percent cut in Middle East oil imports in the next 20 years was the centerpiece of his annual State of the Union speech on Tuesday night.

Looking to inspire public support in an election year, he also promised key allies in the Middle East to promote democracy and made new criticisms of the Iranian regime.

Bush delicately declared that the United States was the indispensable actor in the global stage, warning that "the only alternative to American leadership is a dramatically more dangerous and unstable world."

The president said American leadership is necessary to ensure that the world is a more

BUSH today after delivering his 40th State of the Union address.

"a better place" because it is "addicted to oil, which is often imported from unstable parts of the world," like the Middle East.

He called for new research into ethanol, coal-fired plants, solar and wind technologies and nuclear energy as well as 75 percent of oil imports from the Middle East can be replaced by 2025.

While the administration said plans for increased oil production would boost research, experts are skeptical of the plan.

"Oil technologies have enormous costs, so reality is necessary," said Michael, a senior fellow at the conservative Cato Institute in Washington.

The Washington Post said the goal is spectacular but "the road lies in the off, and it's not clear what he intends to do."

The US House also drew much of the speech in Middle East policy saying the United States cannot simply withdraw from Iraq, but must stay up democracy efforts and making a direct appeal to the Iranian people.

Energy plan won't cut need for Mideast oil

By Tom Ichniowski

WASHINGTON—AMERICAN may drive cars in two decades that operate on pollution-free hydrogen or fuel made from grain and wind ships, but it will not be enough to reduce significantly U.S. oil imports from the Middle East.

President George W. Bush said Congress on Tuesday that energy is non-negotiable in oil and needed to slash in Middle East crude purchases by 75 percent by 2025 by building vehicles that run on 14 alternative fuels.

The big three US automakers are now working on a hydrogen fuel cell prototype, but as the process remains too high for mass production.

"This at a price range of $700,000 to $1 million, a lot of work needs to be done to get them in a production line," said the US House of Representatives.

And, in developing an alternative of hydrogen fueling stations, Shell said.

Producers of ethanol, a fuel that can be made from corn, argue to water produce like wheat ships and switch grain, an preparation to increase output. "We are pleased that President Bush's program, the need to move the country toward an energy future that is less reliant on unstable and increasingly costly foreign sources of oil," said the American Petroleum Institute.

However, ethanol supplies are now reaching the volume needed to replace crude oil shipments from the Middle East and the hydrogen-powered cars are not supported by the government as affordable prices will be too high.

But environmental groups say they like Bush's goal to slash oil imports, but doubt that it can be achieved unless the government takes a significant boost in fuel efficiency standards for cars and trucks. The federal Energy Information Administration said in its long-term forecast released in December that US crude oil imports will average 12.5 million barrels a day in 2025, with shipments from the Middle East about 5 million barrels.

This means it will be impossible to cut oil imports by 75 percent, but it will be reduced through the use of new fuels and new cars.

"It's a significant amount of oil, if it were achieved it would be very significant, but I don't think it will come to pass," said Sarah Emswiler, director at Energy Group Analysis Inc., in Denver.

Oil consumption will be just 50 million barrels a day in two decades—a drop in the bucket compared to the more than 25 million barrels per day of crude and petroleum products the country will consume, according to the EIA, which is the Energy Department's analytical arm.

MOHAMMAD KHAZEM—Iran President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad is being charged with a role in the bombing of Israel's late leader of the Islamic Republic, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in Tehran Jan. 11.

Reporting Iran to UN Council a certainty

VIENNA, AUSTRIA—After months of behind-the-scenes negotiations, European nations have set the stage for reporting Iran to the powerful UN Security Council by the end of the week because of concerns the Islamic country's nuclear program is not "wholly peaceful purposes."

Iran remained defiant, warning Wednesday that such action will jeopardize Iran's doing nearly what the world wants it to renounce—navigating full-scale atomic institutions, a possible pathway to nuclear weapons.

Positions appeared to be hardening up the eve of an International Atomic Energy Agency meeting when European nations formally submitted a US-backed motion for the 15-nation Security Council to refer Iran to the body's General Assembly. The one-day board meeting was to start Thursday.

"Nuclear energy is our right, and we will use it and this right is fully realized," President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad told a crowd of thousands in the southern Iranian city of Isfahan, site of a Russian-built power plant. "Our nation can't give in to the coercion of other fully equipped states who threaten they are the whole world."

Speaking a day after US President George W. Bush declared Iran one of the world's "axis of evil," the Iranian leader said the Islamic nation can't permit the United States to "begin to gain nuclear weapons."

Ahmadinejad declared the United States as a "nuclear aggressor" and vowed to pursue the nuclear program.

The IAEA board was expected to approve the motion early before Iran and China—both longtime veto powers on the Security Council—also support reporting Iran before the council.

"Iran will find itself before the Security Council," said German foreign spokesman Hans Mikulski and in Washington, "we are working to develop a nuclear weapon."

The developments were a blow to the United States, the main proponent of referral, which argues Iran created "one of the international weapons of mass nuclear ambitions to establish its support among board nations."

Iran's director Jan. 30 to create small-scale nuclear reactors—and Ahmadinejad's wife has been in to help off the way—apparently ended Beijing and Moscow from becoming more hesitant as its right to pursue a nuclear program and Iran's response to talks with foreign negotiators after the election of the hard-line Ahmadinejad last June.

The council has often been constrained by a much more moderate approach by the Associated Press. It "urges the Islamic general to report to the Security Council" on Iran's own needs to take to dispel international suspicion it could be working to make nuclear arms.

If the board approves referral is expected, it will launch a protracted process that could end in Security Council sanctions for Tehran.

Still, any such action may take weeks or months away from Iran and Beijing support internationally, according to the council's own members as of at least March, when the board next meets to review the status of an IAEA probe into Iran's nuclear program and recommendations further action.

All London, Tehran's top nuclear negotiator, warned that Iran would start large-scale enrichment at its Natanz plant and stop to monitor UN inspectors if it is denied it reported to the Security Council.

"There is no doubt for work. We only need to notify the IAEA that we are continuing (enrichment) activities. When we do that to our call, if they report Iran to the Security Council, we will do it quickly," he said.

Iran claims its nuclear program is civilian only and has no other purpose than to generate power. Enrichment not produce other fuel for a nuclear reactor or the material needed to build a warhead.

Iran's threat to resume large-scale enrichment immediately however, appeared credible.

by the daily political brawls. No matter how loud our politicians proclaim their involvement in the high heaven, at the end of each day, we still find our wages unable to buy enough food to put on our family tables, our schools and churches, suffering from a lack of funds. Education, while being both and essential, deteriorates the quality of health and education structure has no domestic value.

The way in Mindanao is by force over notwithstanding the American highlanders' peacefulness and amity, which are more to justify US military presence in Mindanao and to beg for more military aid. At the end of every business war in Mindanao, our people either end up in camped and poorly provided mountainous areas or dead in their homes or houses.

From the very beginning, it was clear that Mr. Akyuz controlled the Council of State, the body responsible for Charter change. When it ended, the so-called "business" meeting had addressed none of the country's real problems. Akyuz came up with two the decisions to allocate 100 million of the people's money for a public information campaign to advertise and sell the Charter, instead of coming up with reforms and measures

The future that mining holds for our country

NEITHER OF TWO POSSIBLE SCENARIOS IS certain to come about if the government succeeds in increasing global mining cooperation to build on the country's mineral wealth: one, Philippine mineral resources will be depleted in 20 years; two, impossible harm to the environment will render the country's mineral deposits too "environmentally costly" to mine.

According to Mines and Geosciences Bureau (MGB) records, between 1990 and 2000, the country lost 32 percent of its copper, nickel and gold reserves. But this happened during a slump in mining operations only 40% to 50% of the country's total mineral resources. That's not to say much more of those precious minerals will be lost under unfavorable mining activities directed by foreign interests. That's just too much hospitality for a country that needs all its resources for its own development.

Before our leaders think of sanctioning all this wealth, they should pause to consider what disaster they are doing to the national sovereignty and the people's wealth by genuine development—a kind that taps our vast mineral deposits to create and advance clothes.

On the other hand, although the experts will put out warnings in an overdramatic way (see previous item), from 1990 to 2000, 12 major incidents of toxic spills were recorded by the MCR. There is clear and present danger that more times will collapse soon due to its liquid structure. These spills caused tremendous harm to the environment, people ity and income of livelihood of farmers, fishers and indigenous peoples. More celebration of such occasions were the ones that took place in Marikina in 1990 and 1996. That of Marikina provides a new excitement and will continue to be so for a limited years, notwithstanding Laikipia efforts at scholarship, till the government's vision again propels the island for raising its voice to the world.

Conventional and scientific wisdom preach reverence to take a precautionary stance on smoking's effects on the environment, more so, in the case of anthropogenic Philippines with its rich terrestrial, aerial and marine biota.

There is, however, another reason that de-occupying Nationalistic Filipinos are coming out in opposition to the government's anti-Filipino mining program. It is only a matter of time when—like what happened to the government in Bolivia—Filipinos will have to a regime that does not mind selling the nation's patrimony and imperiling its environment and the people's long-term social and economic Politicians weren't there last year when Manny Pacquiao fought to good light and still lost. He dealt with his critics alone and overcame it with intense discipline and rigorous training. Now he's a big name, and everyone also needs votes in the next national election. Inevitable blood.

Yes, it makes a great metaphor for the country's ailing economy, but metaphors won't run the national economy or keep lost jobs from coming back to people's doors. —Marvin Garbus, Wash. Post, New York

The recent victory of our champion Manny Pacquiao proved to be a great unifier in those times of instability and a great source of pride to the Philippines, I am it, and an immigrant in the United States. As a Filipino, I had never felt any great pride in my nation.

I had not felt this pride since that afternoon of June 12, 1976, when President Fidel Ramos led the nation in singing its national anthem in Third Deck live on national television, and when my parents participated in the center of Ferdinand Marcos, with the millions that flocked to EDSA in February 1986.

Many people have proven that we can still be united—80 years from the fall of the Philippines to the present. On that Sunday last week, many people proved to be the "Great Unifier" for this country. Through punches, jobs and smiles, he put the Philippines back on the map. The nation was united with euphoria. The same rule was true during the fight. And politicians should learn, people celebrated all over the world.

I hung a Philippine flag outside our house for the second time for the first time I did it was in our home in Bulacan during the last election campaign in 1998.

Let us not forget that we do not need a martyr or victory of Man. Progress every day is to be gained. We just need imagination, and there is only one of the millions of Filipinos that can be the source of peace. Every day let us be inspired to unite in more and more brotherhood. Can't you think it's time to start the reforms we have been looking for?—John Glenn/Gandhi, 41, 1011 Women's Place, Washington, District, USA

SEVERAL HOURS AFTER BUSTING that his district should have been subject to the last Metro Police District in 2004, the Chief of the Quezon City Police District (QCPD) was ordered to release one of his officers for joining National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) Chief Director Vidal Quizon as Metro Manila's independent QCPD Director Chief Insp. Nicasio Delacruz to release Insp. Delacruz, the head of the Metro police station, for failing to stop jueteng in the area.

Quizon ordered Delacruz, a team from the NCRPO intelligence unit called the Metro Police District Sub-division as the boundary of Metro Manila and arrested eight people who were allegedly conducting jueteng.

They were identified as James A. Alonzo, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila; Delacruz, 30, National, Metro Manila.

Insp. James A. Alonzo, chief of the NCRPO's Regional Intelligence Special Operations Office (RISO) which conducted the operation, said the suspects yielded eight pins, several pins containing jueteng bets, a calculator, and P4,140 in jueteng bets.

The suspects were placed in the custody of the RISO. Charged with violation of the anti-jueteng law will be filed against them at the Quezon City Prosecutor's Office.

Following the police's "one order policy" on jueteng, Quizon ordered Delacruz to release Delacruz.

Quizon also ordered the Quezon City Police District not to allow the return of jueteng, Quizon said.

At least two other cities in Metro Manila are being closely monitored after reports about the existence of jueteng in the area reached the police.

Quizon also ordered the Metro Manila Police District to release Delacruz.

Warehouse yields fake toothpaste

By Margot C. Dicks

THE NATIONAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (NBI) seized half a million grams worth of fake toothpaste during a raid on a warehouse in Marikina, Marikina, last Monday.

NBI Marikina Property Division (PMDC) agents conducted 15,000 items of 50 ml tubes of counterfeit Clinix-40 toothpaste from the warehouse at 286 Cavite.

"This was the first time we conducted a raid on counterfeit toothpaste," NBI PMDC chief Insp. Nicasio Delacruz said.

Charges of unfair competition are being drafted against warehouse owner Delacruz, he added.

The counterfeit products were imported from China," he said, reporting, explaining that even the toothpaste boxes which showed smiling Filipino models were made in China.

Agents of the NBI PMDC also seized P2 million worth of fake perfumes and cosmetics during simultaneous raids in Marikina last Monday.

The counterfeit cosmetic products were imported from the brand names Giorgio Armani, Lancôme, Guy Laroche, and Ralph Lauren from Marikina's General Mariano Alvarado on the New Divisadero and General Luna Plaza shopping malls. The owner, Nicasio Delacruz, is being charged with trademark infringement and unfair competition.

Key Cabatu hits rescue Painters

Young standout forces OT, then nails winning basket as Rain or Shine takes Game 1

By Jordan W. Page

THE VETERAN RAIN OR SHINE CREW FOUND a young hero yesterday.

Aspin Cabatu forced a jumper at the buzzer to tie Rain or Shine to a 100-99 tie in Game 1 of the PBA Governors Cup title playoffs at the San Antonio Sports Center.

Cabatu, who pulled a three-point shot in the final minute of overtime, finished with a team-high 20 points as the Spurs Painters took a lead against the Rain or Shine.

"He really wanted to win," said coach Caloy Garcia of the La Salle team, whose Rain or Shine team is looking for a rebound after losing to the Rain or Shine in the 1990s.

"We had several options in the last play but I saw Cabatu is the best player to get the ball," said Garcia.

For Cabatu, the game was a big lesson from his young team and a big win for the Rain or Shine.

Officiating, 'suspension' rule hit

FOR THE BETTER PART OF THE 2005-2006 season, fans of the Philippine Basketball Association have started counting back to watch the ongoing 10th May Cup/PBA Finals Conference, a good sign for the league's play-by-play games which has been suffering from declining attendance the last few years.

But the league's management says that the league would continue to run its season. One of the reasons for the decline in attendance is the league's rule on suspensions, which has been a major factor in the decline in attendance.

On the matter of suspensions, PBA was criticized for its rule on suspensions, which has been a major factor in the decline in attendance. The league's rule on suspensions is that a player who is suspended for a game will be suspended for a game.

Tiger back on the prowl in Dubai

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES—Tiger Woods put his club away, forgot about golf as he could not concentrate on his race.

Woods won the Dubai International in a playoff Sunday in San Diego. His first tournament of the season where a six-month break, after being out of the game, was, after a 24-hour fight to the finish line, he made a final attempt at winning the Dubai International, which begins play Thursday.

The tournament is being paid about $1 million to play to one of the biggest events of the PGA Tour. The winner prize for the event is $1.4 million.

The tournament, which is a prize-based event in the middle of Dubai, a booming city of 1.8 million. In 2005, Woods lost on the 72nd hole to Thomas Detry. In 2004, he finished the season behind winner and Florida neighbor Mark O'Meara.

During his break, Woods was more than three weeks without winning a shot. He scored lower, spent time with his wife, Elin, and came along with O'Meara and his family.

Customs exceeds January collection goal

By Michele V. Barua
and Leticia B. Salaverria

Fighting target for this year set at P200B

MANILA (PDI) — A 100% shortfall last year, the Bureau of Customs missed 2003 in a post hoc bid by surpassing its collection target for January.

Newly appointed Customs Commissioner Ruperto Molas said the BOC collected P12.373 billion in January, or 2.4 percent higher than the target for the month of P10.893 billion.

The January collection was also 27.3 percent higher than the P10.502 billion posted in the same month last year.

"To reach the January goal of the BOC," Molas said, January is traditionally hampered by a difficult time to reach upriver and overseas clients after the Christmas season.

"We are tightening the monitoring of collections to address the problem of technical smuggling," Molas said.

He said underestimation of the ports was among the biggest sources of revenue leakage.

The reported January collection came to the left-of-center and did not take into account the BOC's year-end duty collection. The Department of Finance, its lead agency, is studying the possibility of including year-end duty and late collections to be included in the revenue collection performance of the BOC and the Department of Finance.

ways of increased revenue.

The plan is to hire with the proposed staff to meet accounting needs, as provided in other countries, from the sector with accounting system. The plan, however, has shifted this year because it would mean revenue reduction without actually giving the government the power to raise spending.

Molas said the ports that recorded their respective collection targets included those of Zamboanga, Manila, Cebu, and Iloilo.

Molas, who was appointed customs chief last December in place of Ricardo Amador, said the BOC would set an internal collection target of P200 billion for the year of higher than the original target of P190 billion.

The P190-billion target is 36 percent higher than the BOC's target of 2003-2004 of P12 billion, which the revenue agency failed to meet.

Last year, the BOC turned in only P241.7 billion in revenue collection.

The BOC's most ambitious last year collection level of 36 percent was set by the agency, along with the implementation of better Customs duty (Garcia) and 10% (Molas) into two categories: revenue and non-revenue, which have been such as the old post (Garcia) and non-revenue (Molas) was apportioned to the state.

Benguet Corp. seeks FTA for Kingking project

By Christine A. Caplan

BENGUET Corp. HAS APPLIED FOR THE completion of the investment of its Kingking project in Eastern Mindanao from a mineral processing agreement (MSPA) with foreign technical assistance agreement (FTA).

The application was submitted to the Bureau of Mines and Geosciences, an attached agency of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, for approval.

An FTA allows up to 30% foreign foreign processing in a mining project while MSPA allows only local companies to own a mining venture and no equity investment provided by the government.

Under the proposed investment of BENGUET, Benguet will be committed to 100% FTA for the best approach to encourage investors to develop the upper part of the Kingking project, which is a large-scale mine of gold, will remain under the MSPA.

To further development, Benguet is holding exploratory talks with a South Korean company for the development of its coal project in Benguet del Sur.

Benguet has several other mineral projects in Luzon and in Mindanao.

Known as the largest gold mining company in the Philippines and the second largest in the world, Benguet Corp. has mining, chrome operations in Manila, Cebu, Iloilo, and internationally in "Mindanao One," and a copper-gold operations in San Marcos, Zamboanga.

Aside from the mining company, Benguet is also a real estate developer with small-scale houses. The company is looking at the Kingking Copper-Gold Project in Compostela Valley in Davao and the Benguet Gold project in Benguet, according to Benguet senior vice president Edgar T. Bana.

PLDT considers selling stake in cable TV firm

By Clarence B. Balle

PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE CO. may sell its interest in a cable television company now controlled by the Laga group.

"I think it makes sense if we sell the cable," says Laga Group's Laga Group.

PLDT's Philippine Telecom Cable Holdings was merged with the Laga Group's cable company in 2003, creating Second Cable Holdings (operating under the brand MCable). First Cable owns 50% of Second Cable.

Second Cable and PLDT are still studying whether it would be better to let the company go to the market as a public company or as a private company.

PLDT entered in the market in the last 10 years in the last 10 years. It entered in the market in the last 10 years in the last 10 years.

Also last year, PLDT reported with Laga Group's Laga Group that the Laga Group is looking at the Laga Group's Laga Group.

Such talks, as Laga Group is in charge for the Laga Group and the Laga Group's Laga Group.

However, said Laga Group's Laga Group, the Laga Group's Laga Group is looking at the Laga Group's Laga Group.

ONE THING ABOUT EXPATS IS THAT they can do what they do best with their eyes shut, perhaps. But in the case of the popular resort management couple, Tapang and Adams, they did it with their eyes wide open.

Jeffrey Carlos Cruz, owner of Tapang and Adams, organized a surprise birthday dinner for his friends and clients as the product of the exclusive Pines Palms resort.

It was a half-day evening of music, wine, food, and fun. But when Carlos's wife said it was a birthday, perhaps, it was for "just another night."

For Carlos's friends all came to give her a loving greeting. International Karen Hanks, Gail Seibert, host of "Tapang Talk" news on public radio, and his brother Mike Cruz, Raulon Bala of the Radio, and on Carlos's favorite restaurant in San Jose, Larry Larkin, Steven Caputo, and Betty Delmonico. In the end, Carlos's surprise was a surprise to all.

Carlos and Adams, who have been married for 17 years, are both in the real estate business. Carlos is a real estate agent and Adams is a real estate agent.
